Lake And Park Grocery,

Appellant,

v.

Office of Retailer Operations and Compliance,

Respondent.

Case Number: C0226682

FINAL AGENCY DECISION

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) finds that there is sufficient evidence to support the determination by the Office of Retailer Operations and Compliance (“ROC”) to impose a permanent disqualification from participating as an authorized retailer in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) against Lake And Park Grocery (“Appellant”).

ISSUE

The purpose of this review is to determine whether the ROC took appropriate action, consistent with Title 7 of the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) § 278.6(a), (c) and (e)(1)(i), when it imposed a Permanent Disqualification against Appellant on March 17, 2020.

AUTHORITY

According to 7 U.S.C. § 2023 and its implementing regulations at 7 CFR § 279.1, “A food retailer or wholesale food concern aggrieved by administrative action under § 278.1, § 278.6 or § 278.7 . . . may . . . file a written request for review of the administrative action with FNS.”

CASE CHRONOLOGY

In a letter dated February 25, 2020, the ROC charged Appellant with trafficking, as defined in Section 271.2 of the SNAP regulations. This charge was based on a series of SNAP transaction patterns that “establish clear and repetitive patterns of unusual, irregular, and inexplicable activity for your type of firm.” This letter of charges states: “As provided by Section 278.6(e)(1) of the SNAP regulations, the sanction for trafficking is permanent disqualification.” The letter also states that “. . . under certain conditions, FNS may impose a civil money penalty (CMP) . . . in lieu of a permanent disqualification of a firm for trafficking.”

Appellant replied to the ROC's charges in writing. The record reflects that the ROC received and considered the information provided prior to making a determination. The ROC determined that Appellant's contentions did not outweigh the evidence that the store was trafficking. Based on the preponderance of evidence, the ROC concluded that trafficking is the most probable explanation for the questionable transactions listed in the charge letter attachments.

The ROC issued a determination letter dated March 17, 2020. This letter informed Appellant that it was permanently disqualified from participation as an authorized retailer in SNAP in accordance with Section 278.6 (c) and 278.6(e)(1) for trafficking violations. The letter also states the ROC considered Appellant's eligibility for a trafficking civil money penalty (CMP) according to the terms of Section 278.6(i) of the SNAP regulations. The ROC determined that Appellant was not eligible for the CMP because Appellant had not submitted sufficient evidence to demonstrate that it had established and implemented an effective compliance policy and program to prevent SNAP violations.

On April 9, 2020, Appellant appealed the ROC's determination and requested an administrative review of this action. The appeal was granted.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

In an appeal of an adverse action, Appellant bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of evidence that the administrative action should be reversed. That means Appellant has the burden of providing relevant evidence that a reasonable mind, considering the record as a whole, would accept as sufficient to support a conclusion that the argument asserted is more likely to be true than untrue.

CONTROLLING LAW

The controlling law in this matter is contained in the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 2021), and implemented through regulation under Title 7 CFR Part 278. In particular, 7 CFR § 278.6(a) and (e)(1)(i) establish the authority upon which a permanent disqualification may be imposed against a retail food store or wholesale food concern in the event that personnel of the firm engaged in trafficking of SNAP benefits.

7 CFR § 278.6(a) states, in part:

FNS may disqualify any authorized retail food store . . . if the firm fails to comply with the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008, as amended, or this part. Such disqualification shall result from a finding of a violation on the basis of evidence that may include facts established through on-site investigations, inconsistent redemption data, evidence obtained through a transaction report under an electronic benefit transfer system (Emphasis added.)

7 CFR § 278.6(a) states, in part:

Any firm considered for disqualification ... under paragraph (a) of this section... shall have full opportunity to submit to FNS information, explanation, or evidence concerning any instances of noncompliance before FNS makes a final administrative determination. The FNS regional office shall send the firm a letter of charges before making such determination. The letter shall specify the violations or actions which FNS believes constitute a basis for disqualification The letter shall inform the firm that it may respond either orally or in writing to the charges contained in the letter within 10 days of receiving the letter . . .

7 CFR § 278.6(c) reads, in part:

The letter of charges, the response, and any other information available to FNS shall be reviewed and considered by the appropriate FNS regional office, which shall then issue the determination. In the case of a firm subject to permanent disqualification under paragraph (e)(1) of this section, the determination shall inform such a firm that action to permanently disqualify the firm shall be effective immediately upon the date of receipt of the notice of determination from FNS, regardless of whether a request for review is filed in accordance with part 279 of this chapter.

7 CFR § 278.6(e)(1)(i) reads, in part:

FNS shall [d]isqualify a firm permanently if . . . personnel of the firm have trafficked as defined in § 271.2.

Trafficking is defined in 7 CFR § 271.2, in part, as:

The buying, selling, stealing, or otherwise effecting an exchange of SNAP benefits issued and accessed via Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) cards, card numbers and personal identification numbers (PINs), or by manual voucher and signature, for cash or consideration other than eligible food, either directly, indirectly, in complicity or collusion with others, or acting alone”

Also at 7 CFR § 271.2, eligible food is defined as:

Any food or food product intended for human consumption except alcoholic beverages, tobacco and hot food and hot food products prepared for immediate consumption . . .

7 CFR § 278.6(b)(2)(ii) states, in part:

Firms that request consideration of a civil money penalty in lieu of a permanent disqualification for trafficking shall have the opportunity to submit to FNS information and evidence ... that establishes the firm’s eligibility for a civil money penalty in lieu of a permanent disqualification in accordance with the criteria included in § 278.6(i). This information and evidence shall be submitted within 10 days, as specified in § 278.6(b)(1).

7 CFR § 278.6(b)(2)(iii) states:

If a firm fails to request consideration for a civil money penalty in lieu of a permanent disqualification for trafficking and submit documentation and evidence of its eligibility within the 10 days specified in § 278.6(b)(1), the firm shall not be eligible for such a penalty.

SUMMARY OF CHARGES

The charges under review were based on an analysis of SNAP Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) transaction data during the period from September 2019 through January 2020. This analysis identified the following patterns of SNAP transaction activity that indicate trafficking:

- A large number of transactions in repeated dollar values;
- Multiple transactions made from the same accounts in unusually short time frames; and,
- Unusually large transactions.

The attachments enclosed with the charge letter specify the questionable and unusual SNAP transactions indicative of trafficking which were conducted at Appellant during the review period.

APPELLANT'S CONTENTIONS

Appellant's responses regarding this matter are essentially as follows:

- The owner was not present at the store during the investigative period.
- Appellant offered specials in $5 and $10 amounts, such as a case of 24 sodas for $10, two pizzas for $10, three eight-ounce packages of cheese for $10, and three two-liter bottles of soda for $5.
- Multiple transactions in a short period of time may be due to trafficking of which the owners were unaware.
- Appellant denies the allegations.
- The decision is arbitrary and capricious.
- The decision was based on a computer algorithm.
- Appellant rounds down transactions to the nearest $10 increment on large transactions.
- Multiple transactions are because different household members ring up purchases separately.
- Large purchases are because customers do not have vehicles.
- There are no large supermarkets within walking distance of the store.
- Appellant requests a CMP. Appellant explained its eligibility for a CMP.

In support of its allegations, Appellant provided the following documentation:

- Nine store pictures;
- An affidavit signed by the owner;
- Two pages of the owner's passport;

- Four pages of Uber earnings receipts for the owner; and,
- The decision in Affum v. U.S.

These explanations may represent only a brief summary of Appellant's contentions. However, in reaching a decision, full consideration has been given to all contentions presented, including any others that have not been specifically listed here.

ANALYSIS AND FINDINGS

Regarding Appellant's denial of violations, this review examines the relevant information regarding the determination. Once the ROC establishes trafficking occurred, Appellant bears the burden of providing relevant evidence to support a conclusion, considering the record as a whole, that that it did not engage in trafficking. If this is not demonstrated, the case will be sustained. Without supporting evidence and rationale, assertions that the firm has not violated program rules do not constitute valid grounds for overturning the determination.

Store Characteristics

In reaching a disqualification determination, the ROC considered information obtained during a December 16, 2019 store visit conducted by a USDA contractor to observe Appellant's operation, stock, and facilities. This store visit information was used to ascertain if there were justifiable explanations for the firm's irregular SNAP transaction patterns. The store visit report documented the following store size, description, and characteristics:

- Store size is approximately 1,100 square feet with no area of food storage outside of public view;
- Available inventory of SNAP-eligible food items showed stock composed predominantly of inexpensive items, which is typical of a convenience store;
- Two cash registers and one electronic SNAP terminal device;
- No shopping carts and three hand baskets;
- No scanners or conveyor belts;
- No evidence of a wholesale business such as posted prices or separate entrances for wholesale customers; and,
- No meat or seafood specials or bundles.

In addition, the store's checkout counter space areas were cluttered and small and surrounded by plastic barriers allowing very little surface area to place large purchases.

There was no indication that SNAP households were inclined to visit the store regularly to purchase large quantities of grocery items. The available food was primarily of a low-dollar value and there was no hint that the firm sold items in bulk. Given the available inventory, there was no sign that Appellant would be likely to have SNAP redemption patterns that differed significantly from those of similarly-sized competitors.

Same-Dollar Values Transactions

Attachment 1 to the charge letter identifies large transactions made for repeated dollar values. Typically, the frequency of transactions peak at the average for that store type. Thereafter, the frequency of store transactions gradually decreases as the amounts in the transactions increases. The frequency of transactions do not typically spike at specific amounts. Such unusual clustering around specific transaction amounts is indicative of trafficking.

In this case, the frequency of transactions at Appellant peaked in increments of $40 (5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C)) and $100 (5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C)). These transactions represented 42% of the larger transactions at Appellant. In addition, nearly all of these transactions were for even-dollar amounts (5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C)).

Appellant contends it rounds down transactions to the nearest $10 increment on large transactions. The assertion that the firm rounds off large transaction amounts is not supported by the evidence. The store visit documentation states that Appellant does not round off transaction totals. There were many larger transactions that were not increments of $10. This contention also does not explain the spike in transactions 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C), but not similar larger amounts 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C).

Appellant also asserts it offered specials in $5 and $10 amounts, such as a case of soda for $10, two pizzas for $10, three eight-ounce packages of cheese for $10, and three two-liter bottles of soda for $5.¹ The evidence does not support this contention. There was no evidence of specials in the store visit pictures or the pictures provided by Appellant. The prices evident in the store visit documentation show a pricing structure typical of convenience stores, where items are often priced to end in “.x9” cents. With such a pricing structure, it is unlikely for transactions to naturally end in even-dollar values with the frequency they occurred during the review period. Even if many of Appellant’s prices were for even-dollar amounts, the purchase of even a single additional item that was not priced at an even-dollar amount would rule out an even-dollar transaction. Further, the suspicious pattern cited by ROC was for total amounts spiking 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C).

Patterns of transactions spiking at particular dollar amounts indicate that SNAP transaction amounts are contrived. Random data, which legitimate transaction activity approximates, is extremely difficult to produce intentionally; it is very difficult to avoid repetitive patterns when attempting to create the appearance of normal, near-random transactions. That various customers each repeatedly had totals around certain dollar amounts during the review period strains the credibility of Appellant’s declaration that this activity reflected the acceptance of SNAP benefits in exchange for eligible food items. As Appellant has offered no rational explanation for why such patterns might exist, it is reasonable to conclude that these same dollar value transactions are the result of trafficking.

¹ Appellant provided examples to support it offered specials in $10 increments in two separate letters. The prices and items included in those deals differed. For example, in the second letter Appellant stated it offered cases of 36 sodas for $19.99. Appellant also stated that two frozen pizzas were $10 or $12, depending on the brand.

Repeat Transactions by the Same Household

Attachment 2 to the charge letter documents the same household conducting back-to-back transactions in unusually short time frames. Violating stores may conduct multiple transactions from the same household account 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C) to avoid the detection of single, high-dollar trafficking transactions. There are 39 repeat transactions 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C) included in this document.

Appellant insisted that large purchases are because customers do not have vehicles. The record reflects that customers conducting rapid, repetitive, and large transactions at Appellant frequently spent SNAP benefits at better-stocked and more competitively-priced grocery stores, sometimes on or about the same day they shopped at Appellant.

Appellant maintains there are no large supermarkets within walking distance of the store. The Case Analysis Document identifies much larger stores with more reasonable prices located within one mile of Appellant. There is no basis for unusually high customer attraction to Appellant, there being no great price advantage, profusion of ethnic goods, or special or custom services rendered. Oddly, some SNAP households spent considerably less at the larger stores than at Appellant.

Appellant argues that the back-to-back transactions are due to customers splitting transactions to receive separate receipts for each. A SNAP household is one that purchases and prepares meals together, so there would be no need to obtain a separate receipt. Households that purchase and prepare meals separately are considered separate households.

While there are legitimate reasons why a SNAP recipient might return to a convenience store in a short period of time, the examples in Attachment 2 indicate a series of purchases that total to large amounts. SNAP benefits are intended to supplement the food budget for households whose net income is near or below the Federal Poverty Level. It is difficult to believe customers who must rely on SNAP benefits to make ends meet prefer to pay higher prices and spend considerable amounts of their benefits at a convenience store. Spending sizable portions of one's SNAP benefit allotment in a convenience store - when there are larger stores at which one also shops that carry more variety of foods at a lower cost - is unreasonable customer behavior. Moreover, households listed in this attachment conducted this strange shopping pattern of making substantial purchases at Appellant multiple times during the review period. Given the common practice of violating retailers breaking up large, suspicious transactions into multiple, smaller transactions to avoid detection, a firm's explanation and evidence for why these transactions are occurring 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C) in a convenience store should be both rational and compelling. Appellant's explanation is neither.

Large Transactions

The food stock and facilities of Appellant as reported in the store visit documentation do not appear sufficient to provide for all of one's food needs. People generally do not spend large sums at such stores. They usually stop at convenience stores to pick up a few staple food items, such as bread, milk, or a can or two of food that they may consider are not worth a trip to the supermarket to purchase. It is rare for a convenience store such as Appellant's to have purchases like those included in Attachment 4 to the charge letter. This attachment cites 234 EBT transactions during the five-month period of investigation 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C).

5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C).

Additionally, many of the charge letter transactions arrive at, or cluster around, certain dollar amounts in $5 increments (5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C)). Households typically shop to obtain a certain mix of food items, irrespective of the total cost (other than to remain within allotment balances), and do not strive to achieve a particular total. The purchase amount of eligible food items typically approximates a random total. In contrast, firms facilitating trafficking tend to concentrate transactions at particular dollar amounts. In the absence of any compelling rationale to the contrary, the pattern of clustering transactions around certain dollar levels is implausible and indicative of transaction structuring and SNAP-benefit trafficking.

These transactions significantly exceed the county's average SNAP transaction, which was $8.13 for this type of store during the five months of the review period.

5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(6) & (b)(7)(C). Appellant's average transaction is significantly higher than the county's average transaction. As previously stated, Appellant has a limited food stock typical of a convenience store and does not have any features that would induce people to spend substantially more than the typical convenience store purchase amount.

Additionally, the Case Analysis Document contains a comparison of Appellant's redemption activity during the analysis period to three SNAP-authorized convenience stores located within one mile of Appellant. Appellant's SNAP redemptions during the analysis period ranged from over 1.5 to over 10 times that of the nearby comparable firms.

Based on the store layout, infrastructure, and available inventory, it is not credible that the Appellant would so frequently conduct large transactions closely resembling those typically found at a supermarket or superstore. It is not plausible that the firm's customers would regularly carry very large amounts of merchandise around the store without the benefit of shopping carts or shopping baskets, especially since larger, better-stocked stores are readily available and in the vicinity of the Appellant firm. Appellant is not set up to process high-dollar transactions, as indicated by its lack of equipment to facilitate large transactions and limited counter space. There are no legitimate bases for SNAP customers' unusual attraction to the firm such as a superior selection of staple foods, price advantages, package specials, bulk or promotional items, an extensive variety of otherwise unavailable ethnic food items, or special services rendered. Appellant failed to provide convincing evidence to establish the legitimacy of these excessively large transactions, such as itemized cash register receipts. Based on all of these factors discussed in this section, the large volume of transactions for high-dollar amounts is unlikely to indicate a pattern of legitimate food purchases.

Appellant's Responsibilities

Appellant insists that the owner was not present at the store during the investigative period, and that multiple transactions in a short period of time may be due to trafficking of which the owners were unaware. When ownership signed the FNS application to become an authorized SNAP retailer, this included a certification and confirmation that the owner(s) would “accept responsibility on behalf of the firm for violations of the SNAP regulations, including those committed by any of the firm’s employees, paid or unpaid, new, full-time or part-time.” The violations listed on this certification document include maintaining credit accounts and trafficking. Regardless of whom the ownership of a store may choose to handle store business, ownership is accountable for the proper handling of SNAP benefit transactions.

Evidence of Trafficking

Appellant argues there the determination was based on a computer algorithm. As previously stated, 7 CFR § 278.6(a) states, in part:

FNS may disqualify any authorized retail food store . . . if the firm fails to comply with the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008, as amended, or this part. Such disqualification shall result from a finding of a violation on the basis of evidence that may include facts established through on-site investigations, inconsistent redemption data, evidence obtained through a transaction report under an electronic benefit transfer system . . . (Emphasis added.)

FNS does employ a computerized fraud detection tool to identify EBT transactions that form patterns having characteristics indicative of trafficking. This tool does not determine that trafficking has occurred. The ROC must still analyze the transaction patterns, along with other information such as store visit observations, customer shopping patterns, and comparative data from nearby stores. Only then does the ROC conclude whether questionable transactions were, more likely than not, the result of trafficking. Transactions with these patterns sometimes have valid explanations that support the idea they were the result of legitimate purchases of eligible food items, which is why opportunities are given to charged retailers to explain the questionable transactions cited. In this case, based on the suspicious patterns displayed and the other supporting evidence in the file - and in the absence of any reasonable explanations for such transaction patterns - the preponderance of the evidence supports that the “unusual, irregular, and inexplicable” transactions and patterns cited in the letter of charges are the result of trafficking.

Summary

Appellant’s contention that the determination was arbitrary and capricious is not supported by the evidence. The ROC determined that Appellant likely trafficked in SNAP benefits. The charges of violations were based on the ROC’s assessment that substantial evidence exists that the questionable transactions occurring during the review period displayed patterns inconsistent with legitimate sales of eligible food to SNAP participants. The evidence the ROC considered in support of its determination included:

- The irregular SNAP transaction data of Appellant as compared to similar stores;
- Observations made during an store visit by a USDA contractor, including the inadequacy of the firm’s staple food stock to support such large transactions;

- The availability and characteristics of other SNAP-authorized stores located close to Appellant; and,
- Shopping behaviors of Appellant's customers.

The transaction data and overall firm record demonstrate the patterns of unusual, irregular, and inexplicable SNAP activity for this firm is likely the result of trafficking.

Upon review, Appellant failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the administrative action should be reversed. Appellant provided inadequate explanations for the suspicious transactions and insufficient evidence to legitimize its transaction data. It has not convincingly rebutted the ROC's determination that Appellant most likely trafficked in SNAP benefits. The SNAP regulations are specific with regard to the action that must be taken if personnel of the firm have trafficked, which is that FNS must disqualify the firm permanently.

CIVIL MONEY PENALTY

Appellant requested a civil money penalty (CMP) contending that it had established and implemented an effective compliance policy and program to prevent SNAP violations. According to 7 CFR § 278.6(i) of the SNAP regulations, FNS may impose a CMP in lieu of permanent disqualification for trafficking.

For an Appellant's request for a CMP to be considered, the regulations at 7 CFR § 278.6(b)(2) require that Appellant submit supporting documentation within ten days of receipt of the charge letter. Appellant was advised of this provision in the charge letter of February 25, 2020. A review of the administrative record indicates Appellant did not submit documentation to support its eligibility for this alternative sanction by this deadline.

Appellant asserts that according to Affum v. U.S., the requirements for a civil monetary penalty are minimal. Appellant mischaracterizes the decision in Affum v. U.S. The decision made by the court in this case was to remand the case to the district court for a hearing de novo, including whether the Affum was entitled to a CMP. The court provided never stated that the requirements for a civil money penalty are minimal. One of the specific excerpts quoted by Appellant "merely requires a store owner's creation of a written document during the agency's inquiry into a possible violation..." refers merely to one provision of the CMP eligibility requirements.

The regulations at 7 CFR § 278.6(i) specify the criteria for a firm's eligibility for a civil money penalty in lieu of permanent disqualification for trafficking. Together, the criteria listed are specifically identified as the minimum standard that firms must meet in order to be eligible for such a penalty. Given these considerations, the statute and the regulations allow no flexibility below the level of this stated standard. The record reflects that Appellant's reply to the charge letter fell short of this standard since Appellant did not provide the following:

- Written and dated documentation that reflect a commitment to ensure that the firm is operated in a manner consistent with SNAP regulations;
- Documentation of the development and/or operation of a policy to terminate violating employees;

- Documentation of development and/or operation of policy and procedures to implement corrective action in response to complaints of violations;
- Documentation of development and/or operation of procedures providing for internal review of employees' compliance;
- Documentary evidence that establishes that the firm's compliance policy and program were in operation prior to the occurrence of the violations at issue;
- Documentation of dated training curricula and dates of training sessions prior to the violations;
- Records of dates of employment of all firm personnel;
- Contemporaneous documentation illustrating that violating personnel participated in initial and follow-up training prior to violations;
- Documentation to demonstrate a training program that meets or is otherwise equivalent to the following standards:
 - Training for all who work in the store within one month of implementing the compliance policy documented in Criterion 1;
 - Training for any subsequently hired employees within one month of hiring and trained periodically thereafter;
 - Training that is designed to establish a level of competence that assures compliance;
 - Written materials, which may include FNS publications and regulations, are used in the training programs;
 - Materials that clearly state that acceptance of SNAP benefits in exchange for cash, firearms, ammunition, explosives or controlled substances are prohibited and in violation of the statute and regulations; and,
- Sufficient evidence to support the contention that ownership or management did not benefit from trafficking.

In short, the various documentation provided by Appellant is not “substantial evidence” that fulfills each of the four criteria of 7 CFR § 278.6(i). As a result, Appellant failed to demonstrate “that the firm had established and implemented an effective compliance policy and program to prevent violations.”

The standards of eligibility for a trafficking CMP are high. They require substantial proof that a compliance policy and program was established and implemented prior to the occurrence of violations. These standards exist to thwart attempts to falsely present compliance policies and programs that were not actually implemented prior to violations. Although these standards are high, they are required by the regulations and Appellant must be held to them during the course of this review.

The size of a firm, or its number of personnel, is not a consideration in determining eligibility for a civil money penalty in lieu of permanent disqualification for trafficking. It might require significant effort to develop and maintain a compliance policy and program. Yet, even substantial effort does not lessen the consequences if the firm fails to meet the requirements. As noted, the criteria for eligibility for a civil money penalty in lieu of permanent disqualification are clearly stated as minimum standards below which eligibility is precluded.

As Appellant did not provide the required supporting documentation, the ROC did not assess a CMP. According to the requirements stated in 7 CFR § 278.6(b)(1), § 278.6(b)(2)(ii and iii), and § 278.6(i), Appellant is not eligible for a CMP in lieu of a permanent disqualification from participation as an authorized retailer in SNAP. The determination by the Office of Retailer Operations and Compliance to deny Appellant a civil money penalty is sustained.

CONCLUSION

The record has yielded no indication of error in the finding by the Office of Retailer Operations and Compliance that Appellant trafficked in SNAP benefits. A review of the evidence supports that it is more likely true than not true that program violations occurred as charged. Based on the discussion above, the determination by the Office of Retailer Operations and Compliance to impose a permanent disqualification against Lake And Park Grocery from participating as an authorized retailer in SNAP is sustained.

RIGHTS AND REMEDIES

Applicable rights to a judicial review of this decision are set forth in 7 U.S.C. § 2023 and 7 CFR § 279.7. If Appellant desires a judicial review, the complaint must be filed in the U.S. District Court for the district in which Appellant's owner resides, is engaged in business, or in any court of record of the State having competent jurisdiction. This complaint, naming the United States as the defendant, must be filed within thirty (30) days of receipt of this decision.
